American Affairs in England.

Anxiety in England—Mediation Postponed—Mr. Slidell with the Emperor—Lords Brougham and Palmerston on the War—Distress Increasing—Apprehensions of War with America—An Impressible Correspondent—Where are Reserves?—English Politics—Canada.

[Correspondence of the New York Times.]

LONDON, Tuesday, July 1, 1862.—The intensity of the feeling of anxiety respecting the progress of the war in America felt over England, and scarcely less in France, can hardly be less than that experienced in New York. It is the one great, absorbing subject of conversation. John Bull even deserts from his customary unsocial habits, and talks with his neighbor in a railway carriage or omnibus on this dreadful war.

And he likes it less and less. He grows more and more impatient. He thinks that something ought to be done. If the Confederates are beaten—he never says rebels—he looks glum and sneaks savagely. If the prospects of Gen McClellan seem discouraging, he is in good spirits. If there is news of some Southern success, he is delighted. The desire for intervention certainly increases.

As to the prospect, it depends upon the events of the present campaign. England can not act alone, and her hands are tied by all her possessions, while things remain as at present. France is engaged in Mexico, and if the settlement of the Government of that country is to be the preliminary of American independence, there is no hurry. Still, it is certain that the Confederates in London are looking hopefully to Paris, and it is said that Mr. Slidell, within a few days has been accorded a long and confidential interview with the Emperor at the Hotel Persigny. Perhaps it was about the tobacco.

The nervous desire that something may be done breaks out every few days in Parliament. Last night Lord Brougham rose in the House of Lords and denounced the war bitterly as he only can. He had been the friend of America—he had been called the partisan of Jefferson and the Attorney General of Madison; but all the evils and horrors of slavery were not so bad as this war. He wanted it put a stop to—but how it was to be done his Lordship did not inform us. His speech was a scolding, which will increase the public feeling against the North, and lessen Abolition sympathy.

In the House, Lord Palmerston, in answer to an inquiry, said the Governments of England and France were most anxious to do something, but they could not see that the time had come for effectual interference. But the mere fact of the subject being brought up so often, shows the state of feeling. Lords and Commons are waiting for the great battle before Richmond. England and France are waiting.

The cotton famine and distress grow visibly. The stock at Liverpool dwindles day by day. Supply there is none, and prospect very little. All the talk about India, Egypt, Tacalea or the Fiji Islands, is futile. The Government will not protect cotton culture there, because it is committed to free trade; and capitalists will not embark in an enterprise which the end of the American war, by the submission of the South or otherwise, will ruin. So there is no help or hope. The war must be ended, or Lancashire must starve and England be ruined. It is my conviction that Parliament cannot put off the consideration of the crisis a month longer.

The London Times, in sending a post to New York as its regular correspondent, has furnished us with a sensitive barometer to public feeling there—the feeling of the class of people with whom it is easy to find his own sympathizers in New ... reflects the feeling around. Discussion sympathizers in New ... are in low spirits, we see it in the Times' letter. We know when they are rejoicing. A week ago the latest news left them in despair. The last steamer brought indications of reviving hope.

Some of the accounts by the last steamer, which brought New York papers to the 17th of June, indicate a longer protraction to the siege of Richmond than previous advices had indicated. If they can be relied upon, the losses of General McClellan's army have been severe, and his force can scarcely be sufficient for the work it is expected to accomplish. Where are the reserves of the American army? Losses by battles, and greater losses by sickness, are wasting the army, which is distributed over a vast area, while the Confederates concentrate for the defense of Richmond. I see no body of reserves from which fifty thousand men can be sent to insure success or repair disaster. Is it in accordance with military science to risk everything, or risk so much upon a single General or a single army corps? Nothing but success, which may disarm any criticism, can justify such tactics. One can not help thinking of what would be the result if General McClellan was driven out of the James river valley, as General Banks was driven out of the Shenandoah. But these are useless speculations anywhere, and may seem ridiculous, written, as they may be, after the great event has been decided.

If the patriotic people of the North have been disappointed at the feeling of England about the war, none, probably, are so much so as the ultra Abolitionists. They expected sympathy from the well known abolition sentiment of England, but I doubt if there is any part of America, north of Mason and Dixon's, where they have less. The feeling of the influential classes here is eminently conservative. The party of Sumner and Greely has very little support, and that not of a kind to puff them up with vanity. The party that seeks to restore the Union and Constitution as they were before secession, is respected, though there are not many who believe, even now, that it can ever be accomplished.

The state of politics here is one of simple stagnation. The Government is not strong enough to venture upon any bold action; the Opposition is paralyzed by a want of unity among, or of confidence in its leaders; the financial condition is perplexing in the present and discouraging in prospective; the authorities are all at sea with the Navy, and all ashore with their fortifications, or, if you prefer, vice versa. If Lord Derby were enterprising, if D'Israeli could inspire as much confidence in his integrity as admiration for his genius, if Mr. Cowper would pull in traces, if the prospect was pleasant for any administration, I should expect a change. As it is, Palmerston is the man for the crisis, when nothing is needed but a masterly inactivity, and a Micawberish waiting for something to turn up.

A word of Canada. This province, during the Trent excitement, was in high favor; but it has lost prestige, that in spite of the war and the prospect of high taxes, more emigrants go to the United States than to all the British colonies, while Canada receives a small proportion. When Canada was England's most important colony it was different. Now people talk more of Australia, British Columbia, New Zeland, Tasmania and Port Natal than of Canada. Were it not a matter of pride to protect a dependent province, and preserve the integrity of the Empire, you might absorb the few hundred thousand people north of you and welcome. Few here would miss, or care for Canada. It is not even an eligible country for emigrating governesses, for whom there is a fair to middling demand in other directions—it being understood that the amiable creatures shall stand ready to marry at the first eligible offer, to make sure of pupils.

The Morgan Raid—Cynthiana Attacked—A Passenger Train Barely Escapes—Captain Glass Reported Killed and His Gun Captured—Another Bridge Burned—Rebels Menacing Falmouth—A Gang of Guerrillas at Verona, 18 Miles from Covington.

[From the Cincinnati Gazette.]

The messenger of the Adams Express Company, who left this city yesterday morning, on the Covington road, for Lexington, returned last evening, and gives us the following statement:

The train reached Cynthiana at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, and was detained by order of Col. Landram, commanding that point, until 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Captain Glass, with his cannon, was on board this train. About 4 o'clock three battalions of cavalry were seen approaching from the east, west and center of the town, and one of these parties fired on the train. Some sixteen shots struck the express car. The messenger laid down on the floor and protected himself behind his safe.

Captain Glass at once had his cannon, ammunition and horses disembarked and he started over to the west side of the town where Col. Landram had his infantry posted. The messenger does not believe Capt. Glass was killed, although it was so reported. The train was immediately backed down and started for Covington. When it reached Boyd's Station, the conductor telegraphed for orders, and he was instructed to return to Covington. As the train left Boyd's it was fired on by a party in ambush.

The following is another version of the affair.

At four o'clock yesterday afternoon, Mr. Fulton, Superintendent of the Kentucky Central Railroad, was advised by a dispatch from Lieut. Col. Landram, commanding at Cynthiana, that Morgan, with a force estimated at fifteen hundred men, was between that place and Paris, menacing both towns. About an hour later, the operator at Cynthiana telegraphed that Morgan's men had made a furious attack upon the place, and that he was ordered to remove his instruments. Nothing further was heard from him, the rebels having cut the wires a few minutes afterward. At half past 5 o'clock, the down passenger train passed Boyd's Station, which is six miles this side of Cynthiana. Conductor Vandyne telegraphed Mr. Fulton that he remained at Cynthiana as long as safety would permit, when he moved off amidst a shower of bullets. He thought the chances were against the Union forces. The bridge over Elkhorn Creek, about seven miles north of Lexington, was destroyed by the rebels yesterday afternoon.

At dark last evening information was received in Covington that a force of one hundred and forty rebels was encamped at a place called Verona, in Boone county, within eighteen miles of Covington. It was also rumored that the enemy had invested Falmouth, which is on the railroad thirty-nine miles from the city, and that they would probably burn the railroad bridge at that point last night.

The Mayor, we learn, received a dispatch last evening, which reports the loss of the cannon and the capture of the town, but does not mention the death of Captain Glass.

Our reporter left Covington at midnight last night. The town was quiet, and the telegraph office had closed. They had no confirmation of the capture of Cynthiana or the death of Capt. Glass.

Another Letter from General Butler —Explanation of the "Woman" Order.

The following characteristic letter from Gen. Butler, explaining his reasons for issuing the celebrated order in regard to the women of New Orleans, has been received by a gentleman in Boston. The order referred to in the letter was published in our summary of news from New Orleans on Saturday last:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF,
NEW ORLEANS, July 2, 1862.

MY DEAR SIR: I am s... of the ad opinion of my friend ... The ... my ... and expressions in reg... No. 28 leads me to say a word to you on the subject.

That it ever could have been misconceived as it has been by some portions of the Northern press is wonderful, and would lead one to exclaim with the Jew, "O, Father Abraham, what these Christians are, whose own hard dealings teach them to suspect the thoughts of others."

What was the state of things to which the Woman order applied?

We were two thousand five hundred men in a city seven miles long by two to four wide, of a hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants, all hostile, bitter, defiant, explosive; standing literally on a magazine; a spark only needed for destruction. The Devil had entered the hearts of the women of this town, (you know seven of them chose Mary Magdalen for a residence,) to stir up strife in every way possible. Every opprobrious epithet, every insulting gesture was made by these bejeweled, becrinolined and laced creatures, calling themselves ladies, toward my soldiers and officers, from the windows of houses and in the streets. How long do you suppose our flesh and blood could have stood this without retort. That would lead to disturbances and riot, from which we must clear the streets with artillery—and then a howl that we had murdered these fine women. I had arrested the men who hurrahed for Beauregard. Could I arrest the women? No. What was to be done? No order could be made save one that would execute itself. With anxious, careful thought I hit upon this: "Women who insult my soldiers are to be regarded and treated as common women plying their vocation."

Pray how do you treat a common woman plying her vocation in the streets? You pass her by unheeded. She cannot insult you! As a gentleman you can and will take no notice of her. If she speaks, her words are not approbrious. It is only when she becomes a continuous and positive nuisance that you call a watchman and give her in charge to him.

But some of the Northern editors seem to think that whenever one meets such a woman, one must stop her, talk with her, insult her, or hold dalliance with her, and so from their own conduct they construed my order.

The editor of the Boston Courier may so deal with common women, and out of the abundance of the heart his mouth may speak—but so do not I.

Why, these sheadders of New Orleans themselves were at once shamed into propriety of conduct by the order, and from that day no woman has either insulted or annoyed any live soldier or officers and of a certainty no soldier has insulted any woman.

When I passed through Baltimore on the 23d of February last, members of my Staff were insulted by the gestures of the ladies (?) there. Not so in New Orleans.

One of the worst possible of all these women showed disrespect to the remains of the gallant young DeKay, and you will see her punishment, a copy of the order which I enclose is at once a vindication and a construction of my order.

I can only say that I would issue it again under like circumstances. Again thanking you for your kind interest,

I am, truly your friend,
BENJ. F. BUTLER,
Major-General Commanding.

☞ A FASHIONABLE WEDDING IN INDIA.—A correspondent of the Lahore Chronicle gives an account of the marriage of the son of the Maharajah of Cashmere with the daughter of the Rajah of Crumba. The Cashmere chief came to the wedding with his whole court and 10,000 followers. The marriage presents were numerous and costly. According to the Rajpoot custom, each chief on becoming a guest received a present of a bag of money, and on being dismissed by the Maharajah, a handsome khillut, with another bag of money. During the hours of the night the nuptial knot was tied, a form which is literally performed according to Hindoo custom, by tying the garments of the bride and bridegroom together, while the incantations are read. The bridegroom is a boy of nine, and the bride an infant. The marriage ceremonies are said to have cost the Rajah 50,000 rupees, and the Maharajah about 15 lakhs.

Lord Palmerston on Mediation.

In the House of Commons, June 30, Mr. Hopwood inquired whether the British government intended to take any steps to endeavor to put an end to the civil war in America, and Lord Palmerston replied as follows:

"I trust I need not assure the honorable member and the House that her majesty's government are deeply sensible of the sufferings now existing in the manufacturing districts. We know that the privations in those districts are great, and also that those who suffer them have endured them with the most heroic fortitude and patience (hear, hear), thus doing the greatest possible credit to their understanding and intelligence. They know that the sufferings which they endure have not resulted from any bad legislation or any misconduct on the part of the government of the country. They know they are caused by circumstances in other countries over which we have no control. Hear, hear. Her majesty's government would be most happy if it were in their power to do anything which would be likely to afford relief to those unhappy classes of the population. But I am sure the House will see that anything like interference with the war now going on would only aggravate still more the sufferings of those now under privation. (Hear.) With respect to mediation and good offices, there is no doubt whatever that both her majesty's government and the government of the Emperor of the French would be delighted to avail themselves of any opportunity that appeared to offer a fair prospect that such a step would be attended with success. But in the present state of the contest, while the two parties seem animated with the most vehement anger and resentment against each other, I am afraid that any proposal of that kind would not be well timed, and would be sure to meet with objections on both sides. If, however, at any time, a different state of things should arise, and a fair opening appear for any step which might be likely to meet with the acquiescence of the two parties, it would be not only our duty to offer our services, but would afford us the greatest possible pleasure to do so. (Hear, hear.)"

Letter from Hon. C. A. Wickliffe.

Gov. Wickliffe thus responds to the invitation to address the Democratic Mass Convention at Indianapolis, Ind., on the 30th:

WASHINGTON, July 10, 1862.

MR. J. J. BINGHAM—Sir: I have just received yours, as a committeeman, inviting me to attend a Mass Convention of the Union Conservative citizens of Indiana, at Indianapolis, on the 30th inst.

I approve the purposes and objects of the meeting as shadowed forth in the address of the Chairman of your Association.

Allow me to say, that unless the sound conservative people, in their majesty, and by the exercise of all their power reserved and secured to them by the Constitution, act promptly, that Constitution and the Union of which it is the bond, will both be destroyed by the combined efforts of the Abolitionists at the North, and the mad violence of the Secessionists.

Both have long conspired to destroy the Union for different ends and reasons; and their object will be consummated, unless the people, who love their Government as their Fathers made it, come to the rescue.

It is in vain to attempt to disguise the fact that the leaders of the Republican party, in and out of Congress, have combined with the Abolitionists, and are now the Abolition party. They may tell you they are for putting down the rebellion, and "resolve" that this war is not waged for revenge, but to maintain the Union and enforce the laws and when done the war will cease. But ... done ... by ... and ... be restored until every slave in the United States shall be emancipated.

Kentucky appeals from the outrages of these fanatics and disunionists, to the sound people of the free States to protect her against the wrongs threatened, and to aid her in her patriotic endeavors to maintain the Constitution as it is and to restore the Union as it was.

Unless I am prevented by some interposition of Divine Providence, I will be with you on the 30th, under the hope to hear the voice of Indiana in such notes of burning and thrilling patriotism as shall awaken her sister free States to the rescue of their country from the power of those who seek its destruction.

Respectfully yours,
C. A. WICKLIFFE.

John Morgan.

[From the Frankfort Commonwealth.]

Why don't they catch Morgan? He has been for days circulating within an area of about seventeen miles of this place, including Lawrenceburg, Versailles, Midway and Georgetown, and he is moving about as composedly as if he was in Dixie. He requires no transportation—is unincumbered with wagons—gets his food wherever he wants it, and takes just such horses as suit him. He must by this time have the best mounted cavalry corps in the world, for he is taking the very cream of the best blooded horses in the finest horse region in America. The progeny of Eclipse and Medoc and Lexington, and the noblest imported stallions, are now under the trooper's saddle. Why, then, don't they catch Morgan? There are three times his force now in Frankfort, and probably four times that in Lexington, to say nothing of isolated regiments that might be brought to bear against him. Why, then, don't they catch him? We know of no satisfactory answer to the question, unless they expect to catch him by the old woman's direction to children how to catch partridges. But the strategy goes a little farther than that, for, as the phrase now is, they mean "to buy him." That is a pretty operation, where the holes in the bag aint bigger than the mouth of the bag.—But where there are so many ways of getting out besides the way he came in at, and he is mounted on such fleet steeds, the chances are that he will leave us the bag to hold. However, we don't feel competent to criticise military operations, and, therefore, content ourselves that those who have the control are doing the best they can, and that in some way not understood by us or by John Morgan, they will catch John Morgan.

Fears of a Draft—Stampede from Maine to Canada.

The Correspondent of the Boston Traveler writes from the Alpine House in Maine, under date of the 10th instant, as follows:

As the cars stopped at the Bethel station about twenty-four able-bodied and intelligent appearing young men came aboard, en route for Canada, fearing that they might be drafted for the war. At the next depot about ten more of the same class joined them, and at Norway about twenty more. A note was put into the Conductor's hands requesting him to telegraph from this place to Island Pond to have a company ordered out to stop them and scare them back if possible. The Conductor knew that there would be trouble when the cars should arrive, but thought it best to try a little stratagem on his own account. He therefore pretended to send a dispatch, stating that they would all be arrested as soon as they should reach Island Pond. This had the desired effect, and they all left the cars but four and took to the woods, where they must have remained over night, as they were some fifteen miles distant from Island Pond.

There were in the train of freight cars which went up yesterday morning, some forty persons, and when the fact was made known in one of the villages, the men and women turned out and hooted them.

EPIGRAMS.

Some of the Witty Sayings of Witty Men.

It would be difficult to give a better definition of the word epigram than that conveyed in Martial's famous couplet:

"An epigram is like a bee—a thing
Of little size, with honey and a sting."

Martial was, himself, one of the most successful epigrammatists that ever lived; but as he wrote in Latin, the points of his best efforts have been lost in the translation. Burns does not seem to have thought much of Elphinstone's attempt to render Martial's compositions into English; for, on being handed a volume, the result of it, he perpetrated on the fly leaf the following:

"O thou, whom poesy abhors,
Whom prose has turned out of doors,
Heard'st thou that groan? proceed no further;
'Twas laurelled Martial roaring 'murther!'"

Serious epigrams were formerly more popular than comic ones; the reverse is now the case. There is not, probably, in the English language a verse which has been so extensively imitated as Dryden's tribute to Milton. Indeed, it is not unusual to find scholars of no mean attainments forgetting the real author and attributing it to an imaginary one. It is worth reproducing:

Three poets, in three distant ages born,
Greece, Italy and England did adorn;
The first in loftiness of thought surpassed,
The next in majesty, in both the last.
The force of nature could no further go;
To form a third she joined the former two.

A Latin jeu d'esprit of Thomas Wharton, which was written to be placed under a statue of Somnus, is thus turned into English by Wolcot, and has been called a gem:

Come, gentle sleep! attend thy votary's prayer,
And though death's image to my couch repair,
How sweet though lifeless, yet with life to lie,
And without dying, O how sweet to die!

Montgomery once wrote an epitaph for a monument which was to be erected over the grave of three little innocents. As it is essentially an epigram we print it:

Bold infidelity! turn pale and die,
Beneath this stone three infants' ashes lie;
Say, are they lost or saved?
If death's by sin, they sinn'd because they're here:
If Heaven's by works, in Heaven they can't appear
Reason! Oh, how depraved!
Revere the sacred page, the knot's untied;
They died, for Adam sinn'd—they live, for Jesus died.

Boileau used to say that the best epigrams originated in conversation; and of all of his own, of which he wrote enough to fill a volume, he gives the preference to the following:

Here lies my wife, and heaven knows,
Not more for mine than her repose.

Allan Ramsay, whose "Gentle Shepherd" is so much admired, having been handed an orange by the Countess of Aboyne, acknowledged it in these happy terms:

Now, Priam's son, thou may'st be mute,
For I can proudly vie with thee;
Thou to the fairest gave the fruit,
The fairest gave the fruit to me.

Sir Jonah Barrington tells of an eccentric literary man who imagined he was born with a peculiar knack for making epigrams. The editors of the periodicals of his time, however, did not seem to appreciate his fancied vocation; and, were it not for Sir Jonah, it is doubtful whether any of his favorite productions would ever see the light of print. This is a specimen of the eccentric gentleman's ability as a bel esprit:

SIR SIDNEY SMITH AND MISS HUMBOLD.

Says Sidney—"I'll put all white slavery down,
All Europe I'll summon to arms."
But fair Humbold replied, "I'll reverse my renown,
For all men shall be slaves to my charms."
If thus, lovely champion, that tongue and those eyes
Can set mankind by the ears,
Go, fire off your glances, explode a few sighs,
And make captive the Dey of Algiers.
Thus you'll rival Sir Sidney in glory and gales,
But to conquer the tyrant, you'll lead him in chains.

The German Lessing is credited with the following:

"He's gone at last—old Niger's dead!"
Last night 'twas said throughout the city;
Each quidnunc gravely shook his head,
And half the town cried, 'What a pity!'
The news proved false; 'twas all a cheat;
The morning came the fact denying;
And all the town to-day repeat
What half the town last night was crying."

There is spirit enough in the subjoined to justify its being attributed to Punch, in which it originally appeared; having been written by Thackeray:

"Is my wife out of spirits?" said John, with a sigh,
As her voice of a tempest gave warning.
"Quite out, sir, indeed," said the maid, in reply,
"For she finished the bottle this morning."

Rousseau has left an epigram, the English version of which equals the original.—Here it is:

The world is but a comic play,
Where men their varied parts essay.
In dressed amatic, on the boards
Strut bishops, ministers and lords;
While we poor people sit below,
Despised, though paying for the show.
For which we are allowed to hiss,
Whene'er the farce is play'd amiss."

It will be almost superfluous to inform the reader that Tom Moore is the author of the following:

They say thine eyes, like sunny skies,
Thy chief attraction form;
I see no sunshine in those eyes,
They take me all by storm.

Oliver Goldsmith, during his "literary vagabondage," wrote a few epigrams, some of which have been omitted from his works. It is said that he penned this at one of the London taverns, and handed it to a friend, by way of a practical joke:

It is a maxim in the schools
That women always deal on fools:
If so, dear Jack, I'm sure your wife
Must love you as she does her life.

On a fly-leaf of one of Shakspeare's plays these lines were discovered some years ago, in the green room of an English theater:

Shakspeare, 'tis said by some, stole deer;
Oh, shame!—I don't believe the story;
Yet hearts are deer, and hearts he stole,
Which makes his theft his dearest glory.

In the present age epigrams are numerous enough; and, as before intimated, lean to the comic side of things. About a year ago a reportorial wag of the Evening Post altered an old epigram to suit the title of "Wall street," and had it printed as original in these columns. The plagiarism was, however, speedily discovered. In noticing it, a contemporary remarked that our reporter's version was different, in other respects than the title, from the original. This is a mistake. The stolen lines were spoken, impromptu, by the eminent Englishman James Smith, and were soon answered by Sir J. Clark. We reprint them:

CRAFT.

At the top of the street the lawyers abound,
And down at the bottom the barges are found;
Fly, honesty, fly, from such a retreat,
For there's craft in the river, and craft in the street.

To which Clark replied:

Why should honesty fly from such a retreat?
From lawyers and barges, 'od rot 'em!
For the lawyers are just at the top of the street,
And the barges are just at the bottom.

There are some good epigrammatists in "the modern Athens," and their efforts are generally regarded quite favorably. Of course the "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" figures in the front rank. We subjoin a characteristic morceau of his:

Quoth Tom: "Though fair her features may be,
It is her figure pleases me."
"What might her figure be?" I cried.
"One hundred thousand," he replied.

The annexed is also of Boston origin; and we think it reads like the Professor's:

When Sarah Jane, the moral Miss,
Declares 'tis very wrong to kiss,
I'll bet a shilling I see through it:
The damsel, fairly understood,
Feels just like my Christian should—
She'd rather suffer wrong than do it.

Comic epigrams are becoming so numerous that it would require more space than is at our disposal to chronicle even the best of them—and some of them are very good. We merely endeavored to collect a few of the most noted ones.

He says Morgan treated him with politeness, and also reported that both bridges at Keifer's and Kinnbrough's are burned.

A soldier also came into Boyd's and says Morgan's men fired two rounds after the surrender. Capt. Arthur's company, from Newport, are all killed or prisoners. The Cotton Trouble.

England is sorely troubled respecting the future of the cotton supply. At last accounts there was only 213,270 bales in Liverpool, against 1,123,000 at a corresponding date last year. Were the mills to run on full time every pound of cotton in England would be used up in four weeks.—What adds to the prevalent distress is the fact that India, so much relied upon, has failed utterly to meet the public expectation that she would supply, partially at least, the deficiency occasioned by the loss of American cotton. Instead of sending more than usual to market there was afloat, at last accounts, of India cotton only 45,000 bales, against 240,000 last year and 285,000 in 1860. Hence the excitement in the Liverpool cotton market, and the distress, present and prospective, of the manufacturing districts. The past year was, on the whole, a prosperous one for Great Britain, as the profits on the French and Italian accounts made up for the loss on exports to America. The coming year will witness the effect of a cotton famine in England, for it is now very clear that no American cotton can possibly be made available for the commerce of the world before midwinter, if even then.

Letters to the Great War Meeting of New York.

FROM SECRETARY SEWARD.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, July 14, 1862.

To James W. White, George Opdyke, and others, Esquires, Select Committee, &c.:

GENTLEMEN: Your note inviting me to attend a meeting of loyal citizens of New York, to be held to-morrow evening, has been received.

The objects of the meeting are of vital importance. They involve nothing less than a choice between an early peace, with the deliverance of the nation from all surrounding dangers, or a protracted war, with hazards of ultimate national dissolution.

Public duties forbid my leaving the capital at this moment; but I have given to the only male member of my family, not already in the public service, permission to enroll himself as a private in the ranks of the volunteers which it is your purpose to send into the field.

I have the honor to be, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

WM. H. SEWARD,

FROM SENATOR SUMNER.

SENATE CHAMBER,
WASHINGTON, July 14, 1862.

DEAR SIR: I welcome and honor your patriotic efforts to arouse the country to a generous, determined, irresistible unity in support of our Government; but the Senate is still in session, and my present post of duty is here. A Senator cannot leave his post of duty more than a soldier.

But absent or present, the cause in which the people assemble has my God speed, earnest, devoted, affectionate, from the heart. What I can do let me do. There is no work which I will not undertake; there is nothing which I will not renounce, if so I can save my country.

There must be unity of heads and of hearts, so that the Republic may be lifted to the sublime idea of a true commonwealth, which, we are told, "ought to be as one huge Christian personage, one mighty growth and stature of an honest man, as big and compact in virtue as in body." O, sir, if my feeble voice could reach my fellow-countrymen in their workshops, in the streets, in the fields, and wherever they meet together—If for one moment I could take to my lips a silver trumpet, whose tones should sound and reverberate throughout the land, I would summon all, forgetting prejudice and turning away from error, to help unite, quicken and invigorate our common country—most beloved now that it is imperilled—to a compactness and highness of virtue in just proportion to its extended dominion, so that it should be as one huge Christian personage, one mighty growth and stature of an honest man, instinct with all the singleness of unity. Thus inspired, the gates of hell cannot prevail against us.

To this end the cries of faction must be silenced, and the wickedness of sedition, whether in spirit or public speech, unset be suppressed. These are the Northern allies of the rebellion. An aroused and indignant people, with iron heels, ought to tread them out forever, as men tread out the serpent, so that he can neither hiss nor sting.

With such a concord, God will be pleased, and He will give quickness to our armies, so that the hosts of rebellion will be broken and scattered as by the thunderbolt, and He will give to our beneficent Government that blest inspiration, better than any newly raised levies, by which the rebellion shall be a wreck in its single vulnerable part; by which that colossal abomination, which was its original main-spring and is its present motive power, shall be overthrown, and by which the cause of the Union shall be linked with that divine justice whose weapons are of celestial temper.

God bless our country, and God bless all who now serve it with singleness of heart!

I have the honor to be, dear sir,
Your faithful servant,
CHARLES SUMNER.

CHAS. GOULD, Esq., Secretary of the Select Committee.

A Gallant Regiment.

[From the Richmond Dispatch.]

The Fifty-eighth Virginia Regiment had gone through General Jackson's entire Valley campaign, being in every engagement, and always suffering heavily in proportion to its relative strength, having within the last forty five days marched three hundred miles and fought almost every day in the brilliant campaign in the Valley.—Upon their arrival upon the lines of the enemy on Thursday, the 27th, it found itself with only two hundred and ten men to confront the enemy with on Friday, which resulted in the loss as stated above. The Fifty-eighth Virginia Regiment needs no eulogy; history and her intrepid Generals will do her justice. In the last two months the regiment has been attached to three different brigades, and at the present time without a General—all having been wounded, viz: General E Johnson, General Steuart, of Maryland, and General Elsey White. The gallant General Ashby fell leading the regiment to the charge of the "Bucktails," at Harrisonburg, routing them and capturing Lieut. Col. Kane, brother to the Arctic explorer.

A correspondent speaks in the most glowing terms of the conduct of Lieut. Col. Beard. He says:

"Amidst volley after volley of leaden and iron hail, flying thick and fast around him, he was constantly leading and encouraging his brave boys to victory, in the face of apparent death. During the engagement his clothes were completely riddled, eight balls having struck them, but he received no wounds. Col. Beard has been with Gen. Jackson during the arduous campaigns in the mountains and Valley of Virginia, and has fully imbibed the spirit of the invincible 'Stonewall.'

"It will be highly gratifying to the numerous friends of this young Colonel to learn that he is yet safe, and many an ardent prayer will be offered to the God of battles that he will be spared to return to the bosom of his affectionate family."

(For the Louisville Express.)

AWAY WITH SADNESS.

Away, yes away with this sadness,
E'er heaving my breast with a sigh;
Let my heart feel again the same gladness,
That thrilled it in years gone by.

O why has this shadow of sorrow
Fell over the hopes of my life,
Till my pathway each coming to-morrow,
Grows darker with toil and strife?

"To me all is sunshine and flowers,"
Are the words that my heart used to say;
But the clouds raining tears in showers,
Find a type in my bosom to-day.

The birds near my window are singing
The songs that I heard when a child,
When each morn seemed a new life beginning,
And my spirit with joy was wild.

Will these hopes lying dead in my bosom
Ne'er feel the warm breezes of Spring,
That drooped ere the bud reached the blossom.
Like a bird on a broken wing?

Will these shadows that 'round me are thronging,
Reach out to the end of my life,
And my spirit keep striving and longing
To flee from this darkness and strife?

Had my life-sky ne'er shone any brighter
Than the one spread above me to-day,
This burden would doubtless seem lighter—
Now wearing me slowly away.

Then away, yes away, all this sadness,
Let my brow be unclouded once more;
Let my heart feel again the same gladness
That thrilled it in days of yore.

Wonderful Geological Discovery.

BERLIN FALLS, Coos Co., N. H.
July 24, 1862.

To the Editor of the Boston Transcript:—One of the most wonderful geological discoveries ever made in the region around the White Mountains has been brought to the notice of scientific men, and is now creating the lively interest that its importance would naturally demand. Its discovery settles several interesting questions heretofore in dispute among antiquarians and men of scientific attainments.

Two young men residing in the village of Berlin Falls, named Frank Green and Daniel Blodgett, were sliding down the precipitous cliffs of a rugged mountain, two miles from Berlin Falls, and found the entrance to an enormous cave, which was never known to exist before, and, fearing it might be the den or resort of bears, refused to enter it. A somewhat noted guide, whom travelers to this region will remember (William D. Sauboin) heard of the wonderful cave, and resolved to enter it a la Putnam, and, therefore, went in and made a thorough exploration, by the use of candles to light his way.

Finding a beautiful mineral of bright colors in the cave, he was somewhat astonished, and reported the fact. Mr. E. S. Brown, a mineralogist, then went to the cavern, and found the entire cave was formed of solid jasper, of magnificent color and quality.

The entrance to the cave is so small that a man can barely enter it, on hands and knees; but it immediately grows larger and wideus, and about ten feet from the entrance is nine feet high and fifteen feet wide, opening into a fine apartment sixty feet in length, formed of jasper of a delicate blue and ash color, striped with fine red, and looking like striped ribbons on a girl's bonnet. Its exquisitely beautiful coloring and texture, would call forth an exclamation of surprise and pleasure from the dullest student of nature, when, by the bright light of a torch, its beauty becomes apparent. No milliner's shop window ever displayed such a sight as the various colors of the jasper present when brought from the cave to the sunlight.

An experienced mineralogist, John H. Goodall, Esq., with other gentlemen, have just made a thorough exploration of the cavern, and now give to the world the result of their labors. Prompted by a desire to learn the truth in regard to this wonder, I came here, and now communicate the facts to you for publication so that scientific men may go to the cave and make more thorough explorations than we have been able to do, for want of time.

It is apparent that this vein of jasper starts in the precipitous hill, two miles northwest of Berlin Falls, and right beside the track of the Grand Trunk Railway, which all readers know extends from Portland to Montreal.

It runs through solid masses of granite in a N. N. and W. S. W. direction, cropping out several times in a distance of two miles. Stratus granular quartz and flesh-colored feldspar occur, with occasional masses of argillaceous slate, all forming together a very interesting mineralogical region. A mile further east, very beautiful quartz crystals are found, and near the banks of the Androscoggin, which here rushes tumultuously over the rocks, the valuable purple amethysts have been found that have created so much wonder among mineralogists. A magnificent specimen lately exhibited in the window of Bigelow Brothers, in Boston, was obtained here. Albite, Clevelandite, iron and argentiferous galena have also been found. The thousands of White Mountain tourists who have visited the falls of the Androscoggin here at Berlin, know how bold and massive the granite looks as its rugged and craggy cliffs rise to the very clouds in all directions around the falls.

So much for the geological appearance of the region around the newly discovered cave. But the wonders of the cave do not lay in the fact that it is formed of solid jasper, but in the fact that the long disputed question is now settled where the Indians of New England got their jasper to make their arrows, which are found to this day all over the Eastern States. In Essex county, Mass., jasper occurs mostly of a dull red color, and the Indians made arrows of this, but it has never been known where the jasper was found of this blue color, of which so many arrows were made hundreds of years since, and which are now found in abundance all over New England. The question is now settled that they came from this cave.

There can be no doubt that the Indians found this vein of jasper, and well knowing its value for flints (with which to strike fire) and arrows, they commenced, hundreds of years since, to chip off pieces, and continued the work until a cavern sixty feet in extent was cut out of the solid rocks of jasper, for the sides and top of the cave all show that it has been chipped off in many thousands of places.

That this was the work of the Indians there can be no doubt. Evidences of it are to be seen on every side. In many places the vein of jasper has been cut to its intersection with the granite, and there the work suddenly stops, and there is no place where the granite is cut off. On the bottom of the cave a tomahawk and Indian axe were found, and their form and shape show that they were used during the French and Indian wars, when the Pequawkets, Pennacooks, and Androscoggin tribes on the south, and the St. Francois tribes on the north, wandered up and down this beautiful river, and here on its banks are traces of their camps now existing, and their arrows, axes, and other implements are found in abundance. M. C. Forist, Esq., who keeps the excellent hotel beside the falls, has evidences of Indian antiquities that will give a new impulse to the scientific men of the country, now anxiously obtaining information concerning the aborigines. Geologists and mineralogists will also make new discoveries here, and this region, which was a famous resort of Rev. Thomas Starr King, and so many other lovers of nature, will open new wonders as it becomes more and more thoroughly explored.

For 1862.
PATENTED MARCH, 1860.
To which was awarded
The Grand Gold Medal of Honor,
AT THE UNITED STATES FAIR, 1860.

THIS Separator was first invented and brought into use in 1858. It is an improvement on what was formerly known as "Pitts' Patent Separator." DENTISTRY.

DR. LOOCKERMAN respectfully informs the public that he has secured the new and improved plan of putting up

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.

He calls especial attention to this branch.

The Mounting and Manufacturing of Artificial Teeth.

This new process is far superior to every kind of work in every particular. It leaves no crevices for the accretion of saliva or foreign material, but fills up all irregularities and insterstices between the teeth and plate, thus giving to the operation a more neat appearance, and presenting a smooth and uniform surface to the mouth and tongue. It is impossible for food to lodge or remain about this work. This very great consideration has at last been accomplished. The purity and cleanliness of this work is alone enough to recommend it, while its durability and natural appearance is unequalled. We request all who wish artificial teeth to call and examine specimens, feeling satisfied no one would have them in any other than the above style after an examination.

We have teeth manufactured and adapted to any peculiarity of the mouth. All other dental operations performed with care.

Dr. L. has Reduced his Charges.

He offers full sets of teeth—upper and under—of this superior work at $100; partial sets in proportion.

BLOODY AFFRAY—ONE MAN KILLED.—Last night a difficulty occurred on High street, opposite the Marine Hospital, between a party of Irishmen, in which a man by the name of Ned Hogan was killed by John McDermott. The parties had been drinking together, and got into a dispute in regard to some matter, when an affray occurred, during which McDermott drew a knife and stabbed Hogan to the heart, killing him instantly. McDermott, together with Tobias Hegan, John Mahau, and Wm. Hogan, who were engaged in the difficulty, were arrested and lodged in jail. They will probably have an examination before Judge Johnston this morning.

PIC-NIC FOR THE ORPHANS.—The most attractive pic-nic of the season, is that which will occur at Spring Garden on Monday.—It is for the benefit of the German Protestant Asylum. This appeals to the generosity of all. This, at least, must command the sympathy of all. Here are little ones without protection, save what charity affords, and their necessities require us to give a helping hand. So, if you can't go to the pic nic, (we talk to those who read this paragraph), send the poor orphans as much, at least, as you would spend in enjoying yourself if you did go.

ROBBERY.—A lady, whose name we did not learn, who resides on First street, between Jefferson and Green streets, was robbed of $17 last evening under the following circumstances: A girl about twelve years of age came to her house asking charity. The lady stepped out for a moment leaving her pocket book, containing the money, in a work basket setting on the table, and when she returned the girl and pocket book were both missing.

RELEASED.—The following persons were released from the military prison yesterday upon giving the amount of bonds attached to their names: J. H. M. Morris, $10,000; W. Nelson, $20,000; P. H. Suooks, $5,000; Jos. Sweeney, $2,000; R. A. Seay, $2,000; W. B. Hunter, $2,000; G. W. Rhoades, $10,000; J. B. Sandeford, $2,000; and Chas. Kennett, $2,000. T. J. Nall was released without giving bonds.

COTTON.—By reference to our commercial summary it will be seen that cotton has reached the high figure of 40c., a small sale being made yesterday at that price. The cause of the advance of cotton is owing to the very light stock, and the slim prospect of any large receipts. Gentlemen well versed in this staple think that in a short time it will be as high as 50c. The highest price ever before obtained in this city was 17c., which was during the war of 1812.

☞ A difficulty occurred in Jefferson ville at the Ewing Hall last night, at a ball given by the Ahoo Club, between Mr. Ewing, the proprietor, and John Smith, a member of the Club, in which the former was badly injured by being struck on the head with a club. The ball was broken up and the Club left Jeffersonville in a hurry for this city, crossing the river in a skiff.

☞ On and after this date, by order of Brig. Gen. Boyle, no person or persons will be permitted to take provisions to the prisoners confined in the military prison, as he has restricted them to prison fare. Visitors will not be admitted, except on Thursday of each week, and relatives only are admitted then. By order of CAPT. W. T. DILLARD.

THE HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION.—The regular exhibition of the Horticutural Association which will be held at the Masoaic Temple this morning, promises to be the finest of the season. The display of fruit will no doubt be very large and fine, and we hope that the attendance will be large. An hour's visit to the hall will repay any one.

☞ Two watchmen at the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, named Keuody and Tracy, got into a dispute about a gun, when Tracy struck Kenody over the head with a stick, inflicting a serious wound. Tracy was arrested and placed in jail.

☞ It will be seen by referring to our monetary report, that gold has again advanced in this city, the buying rates yesterday being 16 to 17c premium, and 18 to 20c for selling.

MILITARY ARRESTS.—The following persons were arrested yesterday, and placed in the military prison: Henry D. Pope, S. B. Sheats and Dr. G. Roberts.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.—The following real estate transactions took place in Louisville and Jefferson county during the week ending July 18, 1862:

Com. in Chancery to W. B. Belknap, E. Third Street, 108 2-12 by [illegible]	$4,500 00
David Cleaver to H. M. Bullitt, [illegible] Brook street, 30 by 120	7,010 00

Misers.

In 1790, died at Paris, literally of want, the well known banker, Osterwald. A few days prior to his death, he resisted the importunity of his attendant to purchase some meat for the purpose of making a little soup for him. "True, I should like the soup," said he, "but I have no appetite for the meat; what is to become of that? it will be a sad waste." This poor wretch died possessed of £125,000 sterling.

Another desperate case was that of Elwes, whose diet and dress were alike of the most revolting kind, and whose property was estimated at £800,000.

Daniel Dancer's miserly propensities were indulged in to such a degree, that on one occasion, when at the urgent solicitation of a friend, he ventured to give a shilling to a Jew for an old hat "better as new," to the astouishment of his friend, the next day he actually retailed it for eight pence. He performed his ablutions at a neighboring pool, drying himself in the sun to save the extravagant indulgence of a towel; yet this poor mendicant had property to the amount of upwards of £3,000 per annum.

The well known Nat Bently (alias Dirty Dick,) of London, was the victim not only of a craving for gold, but also for old iron.

Another deplorable case might be cited—that of Thomas Pitt of Warickshire. It is reported that some weeks prior to the sickness which terminated his despicable career, he went to several undertakers in quest of a cheap coffin. He left 2,475 pounds in the public funds.

Sir William Smyth of Bedfordshire was immensely rich, but most parsimonious and miserly in his habits. At seventy years of age he was entirely deprived of his sight, unable to gloat over his heaps of gold. He was persuaded by Taylor the celebrated oculist, to be couched, who was by agreement to have sixty guineas if he restored his patient to any degree of sight. Taylor succeeded in his operation, and Sir William was enabled to read and write without the aid of spectacles during the rest of his life. But no sooner was his sight restored, than the Baronet began to regret that his agreement had been for so large a sum. His thoughts were now to cheat the oculist. He pretended that he had only a glimmering, and could see nothing distinctly; for which reason the bandage on his eyes was continued a month longer than the usual time. Taylor was deceived by these misrepresentations, agreed to compound the bargain, and accepted twenty guineas instead of sixty guineas. At the time Taylor attended him, he had a large estate, an immense amount in stocks, and 6,000 pounds in the house.

A miser of the name of Fosene, who had amassed enormous wealth by the most sordid parsimony and discreditable extortion, applied his ingenuity to discover some effectual mode of hiding his gold. With great care and secrecy, he dug a deep cave in his cellar. To this receptacle to his treasure he descended by a ladder, and to the trap door he attached a spring lock, so that, on shutting, it would fasten of itself. By-and-by the miser disappeared; inquiries were made, the house was searched, woods were explored, and ponds were dragged, but no Fosene could they find.—Some time passed on; the house in which he had lived was sold, and the workmen were busily employed in its repair. In the progress of their work they met with the door of the secret cave, with the key in the lock outside. The first object upon which the lamp reflected was the ghastly body of Fosene, the miser, and scattered around him were heavy bags of gold and ponderous chests of untold treasure; a candlestick lay beside him on the floor. This worshipper of Mammon had gone into his cave to pay his devoirs to his golden god, and became a sacrifice to his devotion.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 18.—Dispatches to the Executive Department to-night say the rebels have taken possession of Henderson, Ky., captured Newburg, Ind., 22 miles below Evansville [Newburg is 10 miles above], and threatened Evansville.

One Federal soldier was killed, 250 sick in hospital taken prisoners, 250 stand of arms captured, and all the hospitals destroyed at Newburg.

Two citizens of Warrick county, who came over with the enemy, were killed by the citizens of Newburg.

BAGDAD, KY., July 18, 5 P. M.—A soldier of the 77th Ohio Regiment has just arrived here from Cynthiana, having left there at 10 o'clock this morning, being a paroled prisoner. He states that T. R. Rankin in Cynthiana told him the killed and wounded on both sides would amount to about 150. Morgan released all the prisoners on parole. Two of his cavalry regiments were about to leave for Lexington at nine o'clock in the afternoon.

Col. Landrum was not taken prisoner. He escaped with 40 men. He says he heard from several prisoners that Capt. Glass was killed.

Morgan's Adjutant reported at Rankin's Hotel that Morgan's force mustered 2,700 men, besieds those who lately joined him.

ST. LOUIS, July 18.—A large amount of supplies, hospital stores, clothing, horses, and cattle left last night on Government transports for Gen. Curtis' army, at Helena, Ark.

PHILADELPHIA July 13.—The Inquirer says that Gen. Halleck is on his way to Washington, to take his position as General Commanding the Armies of the United States. Gen. Halleck is to remain in Washington. Generals McClellan and Pope, are to continue in their present commands.

BANGOR, ME., July 17.—A grand patriotic meeting was held here this evening in aid of enlistments for, the late requisitions of troops by the General Government.—The enrolled militia of this city and neighboring towns, numbering 1,000 men, marched in procession. The hall was crowded at an early hour. The immense mass of people caused the breaking down of all portions of the approach to the hall and some hundreds of people were precipitated down fifteen feet below on the sidewalk, but fortunately there was no loss of life. The meeting then adjourned to the area in front of the Bangor House, where Vice-President Hamlin, Gen. Howard, Hon. S. H. Blake, W. H. McGrillis and others delivered addresses. Resolutions were adopted, pleading the people of the Penobscot Valley to sustain the Government with their full quota of troops, and calling on the Administration to prosecute the war with vigor, and to hang the men of whatever color they can command.

WASHINGTON, July 18—The following is an extract from a recent dispatch received at the War Department from Gen. Saxton, dated:

BEAUFORT, S. C., July 10.

Hon. E. M. Stanton, Sec'y of War:

I have the honor to report that everything pertaining to the special service for which I am sent to this department is in a favorable condition. The negroes are working in industriously.

We have some 15,000 acres of corn and cotton under cultivation. It looks well.

The system of voluntary labors works admirably. The people are contented and happy. When the new crop is harvested will cease to be a burden on the Government.

By adopting a judicious system of reward for labor almost any amount can be obtained, its proceeds will pay the expenses. I am with great respect your truly,

R. SAXTON,

Brigadier General.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—We feel at liberty to state that yesterday a portion of the army of General Pope entered the important town of Gordonsville, Va., unopposed, and nearly destroyed all the railroad paraphernalia of that point—the junction of the Orange & Alexandria and Virginia Central Railroads. Three-fourths of the troops, munitions, and supplies of every description for the rebel army at Richmond of necessity passed through Gordonsville by rail. The blow is, therefore, a most important one, more especially as it is the first of a series which we trust will come more to cripple the efficiency of the rebel Richmond army than aught that has yet occurred.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16.—Arrived, ship Flying Eagle, from Boston. Sailed, ship Belle of the Sea, for New York.

Steamer Pacific, from the Northern coast, brings $65,000 in gold from Oregon and $40,000 from British Columbia.

WASHINGTON, July 18—Information up to last night has been received from Gen. McClellan's headquarters. The health of the troops has much improved and no difficulty exists in receiving subsistence supplies. No military movements of consequence are mentioned.

One hundred and seventy-five witnesses have been examined by the committee on the conduct of the war, and the testimony is very voluminous, and it is estimated will cover 1800 octavo pages printed.

It has been deposited with the Superintendent of Public Printing, to be accurely kept until the further orders of the committee.

Ex-Gov. Bantwell, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, received his commission yesterday, and is now engaged in arranging the details of his Bureau.

Minister Sanford, who is absent from Belgium on leave of absence, will probably return to that place by the next steamer.

Commander Dahlgreen, having been appointed Chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, necessarily vacates his offices as commander of the Washington Navy Yard.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF VIRGINIA, WASHINGTON, July 18.

GENERAL ORDER NO. 5.

Heretofore, as far as practicable, the troops of this command will subsist upon the country in which their operations are carried on in, all cases of supplies for this purpose will be taken by the officers to whose department they properly belong, under the order of the commanding officer for whose use they are intended; vouchers will be given to the owners stating on their face that they will be payable at the conclusion of the war upon sufficient testimony being furnished that such owners have been loyal citizens of the United States, since the date of the vouchers, whenever it is known that supplies can be furnished in any district of the country, where the troops are to operate, the use of teams for carrying subsistance will be dispensed with as far as possible. By command of

MAJ. GEN. POPE.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF WAR, WASHINGTON, July 18, 1862.

GENERAL ORDER NO. 6.

Hereafter in any operations of the cavalry forces in this command, no supply or baggage trains, of any description, will be used unless so stated specially in the order for the movement, two days cooked rations will be carried on the person of the men, and all villages or neighborhoods through which they pass will be laid under contribution in the manner specified by Gen'l Order No. 5. Current series for these headquarters for the subsistence of men and horses movements of cavalry must always be made with certainty, and no delays in such movements will be excused hereafter on any pretext, whenever the order for the movements of any portion of the army emanates from these headquarters. The time of marching and other duties will be expressly designated and no departure therefrom will be permitted to pass unnoticed without the gravest and most conclusive reason. Commanding officers will be held responsible for the strict and prompt compliance with every provision of this order. By command of MAJ. GEN. POPE.

GEO. D. RUGGLES, Col.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF VA., WASHINGTON, July 18.

GENERAL ORDERS NO. 7.

The people of the Valley of the Shenandoah and throughout the region of operations of this army, living along the lines of railroads and telegraph, and along the routes of travel in the rear of the United States forces, are notified that they will be held responsible for any injury done the track, line, or road, or for any attacks upon trains or straggling soldiers by bands of guerrillas in their neighborhood.

No privileges or immunities of war can apply to lawless bands of individuals not forming a part of the organized forces of the enemy, nor, wearing the garb of soldiers, and seeking and obtaining safety on the pretext of being peaceful citizens, steal out in the rear of the army, attack and murder straggling soldiers, molest teams of supplies, destroy railroads, telegraph lines and bridges, and commit outrages disgraceful to civilized people and revolting to humanity.

Evil disposed persons, in the rear of our army, who do not themselves engage directly in these lawless acts, give encouragement by refusing to give information by which such acts can be prevented or the perpetrators punished. The safety of the life and property of all persons living in the rear of our advancing army depend upon the maintenance of peace and quiet among themselves and upon the unmolested movements through their midst of all belonging to the military service.

They are to understand distinctly that the security of travel is their only warrant of personal safety, and it is therefore ordered that whenever a Railroad, wagon road, or telegraph injured by parties of guerrillas, the citizens living within 5 miles of the spot, shall be turned out en masse to repair the damage, and shall besides pay the United States in money, or in property to be collected by military force, the full amount of the pay and subsistance of the whole force necessary to cause the performance of the work during the time occupied in completing it. If a soldier or legitimate follower of the army be fired upon from any house, the house shall be razed to the ground, and the inhabitants sent prisoners to the headquarters of the army. If such an outrage occur at any place distant from settlements, the people within five miles shall be held accountable and made to pay an indemnity sufficient for the case, and any persons detected in such outrage, either during the act, or at any time afterw rd shall be shot without civil process. No such acts can influence the result of this war, and they can only lead to heavy affliction to the population. By command of

MAJ. GEN. POPE.

Signed, GEO. D. RUGGLES, Col.

WASHINGTON, July 18.—A letter from Warrenton says that our troops are all in fine spirits at the prospects of active operations; meutiou is also made of an important position already occupied. The people of Warrenton are represented as courteous to our troops.

The Warrenton White Sniphur Springs, recently infested by the rebel scouts, were passed yesterday by a detachment of our cavalry without opposition.

Reports exist in camp, on rebel authority, that Stonewall Jackson is at Staunton preparing for another visit down the Valley, he will not have an indisputed march.

The command of Gen Hatch is reported to have penetrated as far as Rapid Ann Station, on the Virginia Central Railroad, seventy five miles from Washington.

Arrival of the City of Washington.

CAPE RACE, July 18.—The steamship City of Washington, from Liverpool of the 9th via Queenstown of the 10th, arrived off this point at 1 o'clock this P. M. She was boarded by the news yacht of the Associated Press, and the following summary of her news, obtained from her dates, are 4 days later than those per Persia at New York.

The steamship Africa, from Boston, arrived at Liverpool on the 7th; steamship Etna, from New York, arrived at Queenstown on the 10th; steamship Nova Scotian, from Quebec, arrived at Londouderry on the 10th inst.

In the House of Lords the African slave trade bill had been read a second time.

Earl Derby expressed fears that, unless a treaty was made with France like that of America, the putting a stop to the slave trade would be ineffectual.

Earl Russell said that France had declined to enter into a similar treaty, but he believed she would offer no objection to the exercise of its prosecution.

Lord Palmerston confirmed the statement that Russia had recognized Italy, and said he believed Prussia would do the same.

After considerable debate, a resolution against the English forces interfering in China was rejected.

Rumors that France would back out from the Mexico expedition continued.

The Paris Constitutionnel says the glory of the French arms once vindicated, and money matters are settled with Mexico. The proceedings against her will terminate.

Gen. Prim had arrived in England.

The cotton manufacturers of Rome had sent a deputation report to represent the difficulties they were laboring under. A similar deputation from Liste also waited upon the Emperor.

The Paris bourse was heavy at 68@30d for rentes.

The Italian Ministers had again strongly represented the rumors of Italy's interference in Mexico.

The U. S. corvette Tuscarora arrived at Southampton, on the 7th, just from Cadiz. The object of her visit was unknown.

The Opinione Nationale says Russian papers revive the rumor that France, in consequence of the stubbornness of England against doing so, has invited Russia to join her in the Paris Congress.

The London Herald believes the French Government entertains very serious intentions of interfering to end the civil war in America.

The London Daily News gives currency to rumors that Generals Scott, Banks and Pope were about to enter Mr. Lincoln's Cabinet. It thinks the occasion of Mr. Lincoln's visit to Gen. Scott indicates the military operations are to be prosecuted with the utmost vigor, and to be kept from the civilian interference, which hath hitherto, through jealousy, hampered the movements of Gen McClellan.

The London Times has daily editorials on the position of affairs in America. It says the dissevered States seem to be fast approaching that point where they must become two reasonable nations, or go on to anarchy and ruin. The offer of our mediation would only be received with insult.

The Times recurs to hostility to England, and professes itself wholly at a loss to accont for it. The same journal regards the new tariff in effect prohibitionual and the annihilated trade with Europe will be all but annihilated, but the effect will be most severely felt in America. The measure will enlist on the side of the south all the sympathies and interests of the two greatest nations in Europe. The parliamentary proceedings were not of much interest. The fortifications were again discussed in the Commons, and there was a debate in which Mr. Cobden and Palmerston indulged in some rather bitter hostilities.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 17.—Arrived bark Lucy Stone from New York.

But the Sewing Machines manufactured by Greenman & True are not liable to these objections, as any person, on even a moment's examination, will readily discover. They will do more and better work than any other machine ever offered to the public, making the most beautiful lock stich, alike on both sides. Nashville, Cin.
Com. Perry, Pitts.
Big Grey Eagle, Nash.
J. S. Pringle, Colum us.
Belle Creole, Tenn. river.
St. Cloud, St. Louis.

THE RIVER at this point commenced receding yesterday, and was falling slowly during the day, with five feet nine inches water in the canal last evening by the mark, and four feet water in the pass on the falls. During the previous twenty-four hours the river had fallen fully four inches, which is equal to one foot at Portland. The weather has been clear and very pleasant for this season of the year.

At Pittsburg the river is falling, with less than four feet water in the channel by the pier mark. On Glass House Ripples there is less than three feet water, and boats going up loaded have great difficulty in getting over. Owing to this fact, boats leaving Pittsburg are enabled to take just partial loads, with the hopes of filling up below.

The river at Cincinnati continues to fall quite fast, with a little over thirteen feet water in the channel.

The Kentucky river is very low, and boats are not able to ascend that stream. Forces are at work repairing the dams so that they will be in order by the time the river again rises.

The Cumberland river is falling with less than two feet water on the shoals. No boats that are loaded are able to get over the shoals, and even without cargoes the lightest boats only are able to get over the shoals. The trade up Cumberland river is at an end for some time. Cotton is being sent to the shoals from Nashville in flats propelled by rude oars, from whence it is transferred to steamboats.

The Tennessee river at last accounts was falling, with only four feet water in the channel. None but the lightest boats are now running in that trade.

☞The big Grey Eagle has resumed her place in the Henderson trade, and left for that place yesterday.

☞The Cottage cleared yesterday evening for Florence, Alabama, with a good trip.

☞The Cottage passed down for Tennessee river yesterday, having aboard seventy-five soldiers.

☞The Silver Moon passed down for Memphis yesterday. She has twenty tons of iron for the gunboats building at Mound City.

☞Capt. Sam Mason and Capt. John List are building a new boat at Cincinnati for the Cincinnati and Wheeling trade.

☞The Commodore Perry, that arrived from St. Louis yesterday, discharged a lot of grain at the wharf for the United States Government.

☞The Sir W. Wallace arrived from Pittsburg yesterday with 1,500 barrels of salt. She will lay up at this place for repairs.

☞The new steamer Marmora No. 2, made a trial run at Pittsburgh, on Wednesday. She was advertised to leave that port for St. Louis yesterday.

☞The Zanesville (O.,) Courier, says that James Granger, Esq., of this city, is building a fine light draught steamboat on the Putnam side of the river, opposite Zanesville. It is 110 feet in length, 20 in width, flat bottomed, and is capable of running (without load) in about 12 inches of water. The boat will have all the most modern improvements, and is calculated to run in the Muskingum river trade.

☞The Diadem, for Pittsburg, and the Prairie Rose, for Cincinnati, left St. Louis, Wednesday evening; and the Belfast was advertised to leave for Cincinnati on Thursday.

☞Owing to the low water on the lower rapids of the upper Mississippi, all the large boats have been compelled to lay up at St. Louis.

☞It is rumored that the Arago will change owners while at Cincinnati.

☞The trouble, at Cincinnati, between the Irish and negro hands, employed on steamboats, have not yet ended. The Cincinnati Gazette of yesterday, says:

As the crew of the steamor Magnolia, which arrived at the landing last evening, were proceeding up Walnut street, between 8 and 9 o'clock, they were attacked by a crowd of fifty or more Irishmen, who pelted them with bowlders, and in the melee, some five or six pistol shots were fired. The crew of the steamer—who are all colored men—succeeded in escaping from their assailants.

☞The Trio having received her new shaft is advertised to leave for St. Louis, this evening, at 4 o'clock. She is in charge of Capt. W. B. Russell, a good boatman, assisted in the clerk's office by our friend Earhart, who will be found attentive.

FOR MEMPHIS.—The splendid steamer Commercial, in charge of the gallant Archer, is advertised to leave for Cairo, Hickman and Memphis, at 5 o'clock, this evening. She leaves the Portland wharf, providing excellent accommodations for passengers; and both passengers and shippers can rely upon her going through on time. The clerks are Lon. Beeler and Jim. Green, who will be found very attentive.

☞The Sandy Valley is the regular Madison packet to-day.

☞The St. Cloud and J. S. Pringle both passed over the falls yesterday under the guidance of Pink Varole, the well-known falls pilot.

☞The Nashville from Tennessee river yesterday brought up 50 bales of cotton for this place.

☞The J. T. McCombs has withdrawn from the Henderson trade and is now loading at Portland for Nashville.

☞Business at the city wharf yesterday was quite brisk. The number of arrivals and departures amounted to 20. The Bon Accord and Commodore Perry were discharging large lots of grain, the Sir Wm. Wallace was discharging salt, and several other steamers were receiving and discharging cargoes. There is considerable cotton on the wharf for shipment to the East.

☞The Star Grey Eagle is the regular packet for Owensboro, Evansville and Henderson to-day. She leaves the Portland wharf at 5 o'clock, in charge of careful and prudent officers, who will see that the wants of the passengers are attended to.

☞The Commercial with a big trip of freight and passengers will arrive from Memphis early this morning. She returns at 5 o'clock this evening.

☞The Fanny Bullitt is on the ways at Mound City being repaired.

FOR NASHVILLE.—The J. T. McCombs will leave for Nashville this evening at 5 o'clock. She is in charge of Capt. Ballard, an old boatman who is well known. The McCombs has entered the trade between this place and Nashville and will remain permanent in it.

FOR MEMPHIS.—The Chancellor, having been thoroughly repaired, will leave for Memphis to day. She is in charge of Capt. Stewart, a good boatman.

☞We copy the following from the Nashville Dispatch of yesterday:

The effects of the late rains are beginning to tell upon the Cumberland. It is again rising slowly, and there are about twenty-six inches water in the channel at Harpeth.

The only arrival yesterday was the May Duke, from Paducah. Her recent trip up the Tennessee river was eminently successful, she having freighted out 408 bales of cotton, at $10 per bale.

The departures were the Cordelia Ann and H. V. Baird, for Smithland, and the May Duke, for Florence, Ala., with a cargo of cotton for reshipment North.

Commercial.

OFFICE LOUISVILLE EXPRESS,
Friday Evening, July 18, '62.

The market for Gold to-day was much firmer, and the rates advanced fully ½¢ on the quotations of yesterday. The buying rate to-day was 16@16⅛¢, and in several instances as high as 17¢ was paid by the brokers, and in the afternoon 17⅛¢ could be obtained for round lots. At the close the market was buoyant, with every prospect that another advance will be established to-morow. The amount offering was not large, but the brokers readily took all that was offered at our quotations. The brokers had but few calls for gold yesterday, but they did not appear willing to supply the wants of those who did call upon them, except at very high rates. They were all holding out of the market in anticipation of a further advance. None would sell to-day at less than 19@20¢ premium. The demand for the old issue of Treasury notes continues good, and bankers to day were paying as high as 6¢ to 6⅜¢ prem. The market for Exchange remains exceedingly dull at ½ discount buying and par for ¼ premium selling, the inside being the ruling quotations. The following are our quotations for Exchange and Coin:

	Buying.	Selling.
New York	½ dis	par
Boston	½ dis	par
Philadelphia	½ dis	par
Baltimore	½ dis	par
Gold	16@17 prem.	19½@20
Silver	8 prem.	9@11
Demand Notes	6@6⅜ prem.	....

The general market remains quiet, with but little of consequence doing. Flour was firmer, owing to favorable advices from the East, and prices were fully 5¢ higher, with a fair demand at the advanced price, both for shipping and home consumption. The transactions were fair at $4 10@4 80 for superfine to fancy family brands. Wheat is arriving but slowly, and all that arrives is readily purchased by the millers at 75@85¢ for prime red to choice white. Corn is dull, with but a small demand, and we continue to quote at 33@34¢. Oats are firm at 35¢, with, however, but a small inquiry. Groceries remain very firm, with a good demand for the home trade. New Orleans Sugar sells at 9@10¢, Molasses at 45¢, and prime Rio Coffee at 22½@23¾¢.

Provisions are unaltered. The market remains dull, with no demand, and holders appear rather anxious to realize. Mess Pork could be purchased at $10, but there are no buyers. Bacon is very quiet at 3¾ to 6¾¢ for shoulders to clear sides. Lard is very firm, and prices are high, it being held at 8@8¾¢ for prime city.

Coffee in New York.

The following we copy from the New York Times:

Rio has been in active request to-day at full prices; 4,000 bags were sold at 21@22½¢ ₩ lb, usual terms; also, 300 bags Jamaica on private terms. Week's receipts of Rio, 9,156 bags; sales 13386 bags, including, according to Messrs. Wm. Scott & Son, 2,988, balance per Bonanza, at 21¾¢; 2,585 per Symmetry, at 20½@21¾¢; 3,513 per Tallulah, at 20¾¢; and 2,800 per Anna Catharina (a resale) at 21¾¢; and on speculation, 3,000 per Wilhelmina, at 21¾¢, the market closing strong, with but little offering. Stock of all kinds on hand this morning, 180,646 pkgs, including 129,763 bags Rio and Santos, 3,568 bags and 12,975 mats Java, 21,840 bags Maracaibo, 4,585 bags Cears, 2,985 bags Laguayra, 1,975 bags St. Domingo, and 4,285 bags of other descriptions. Closing quotations: Java, 26@26¾¢; Laguayra, 21¾@23½¢; Maracaibo, 21½@23¾¢; Rio, 20½@22¾¢; and St. Domingo, 19¾¢ ₩ lb, usual terms.
